The Swiss Center international interdisciplinary masters and graduate programs for conflict research, management and resolution are an important source of academic and practical expertise addressing the increasing interest in studying conflict transformation, resolution, problem-solving and negotiation. The expertise gathered and disseminated by the Swiss Center becomes even more crucial in the context of recent political and historical developments in the Middle East and around the globe. Our masters and graduate programs focus on political, psychological, social and cultural aspects of conflicts and their settlements and on the role of technology, telecommunications and new media in resolving disputes. Special emphasis is placed on the study of the Israeli-Palestinian conflict and ethno-political conflicts in the Israeli society, and on developing coping strategies that take into account the relevant political, social and cultural context. Our teachers are top level researchers and practitioners.

New at the Swiss Center: An international M.A. degree program: International Law and Conflict Resolution

(Registration for the 2017-18 academic year has opened)

A joint interdisciplinary program of the Swiss Center at the Faculty of Social Sciences and of the Faculty of Law.

This interdisciplinary international program, which is taught in English, is open to graduates of programs in relevant fields, such as international relations, law, political science, communication, psychology, dispute settlement, sociology, history and Middle East studies, who have studied in Israel or abroad. The program is devoted to studying the sources and causes of domestic and external conflicts in general and in Israel in particular. It explores the methods, techniques and strategies that can help manage and resolve these conflicts from different disciplinary points of view, including international relations, law, political science, social psychology, communication and media studies and sociology.
